A Paper by Professor Ely. Professor Richard T. Ely of Johns Hopkins University visited this city last night for the purpose of attending the meeting of the True Commonwealth Club in Dr. Bland's parlors, 1121 Tenth street northwest, he being the essayist of the evening. This paper was entitled "Person and Property," and the trend of his argument was that legislators and jurists hold property as more sacred than persons. He thinks this is neither civilized nor Christian. He confidently looks forward to a revision of public sentiment, law and jurisprudence on this subject. The paper was discussed in a most friendly and flattering manner by Dr. T. A. Bland, Rev. Dr. Kemball, Colonel R. J. Hinton, Colonel M. Pechin, Mr. Charles Frederic Adams and Mr. E. T. Peters. Professor Ely returned to Baltimore at the close of the meeting. He is a corresponding member of the club. kins University visited this city last night wise, Find to Interest Them.

W. H. Harris-Did you know that spiritualism is on the increase in Washington? I know several ladies in the Navy Department who have been converted to the faith recently. I am not a believer, and there are a good many other rish stories I don't believe in. I should think that if a person dies and could come back to this world, as hard as it is, he or she would remain here instead of returning to that land, where they say they sing, "When I've been there ten Thousand years." It appears to me this kind of thing would become very tiresome. I am content, however, to let people believe just whatever they want.

become very tiresome. I am content, however, to let people believe just whatever they want.

W. Tindall—Many people who witness Manisfield's elever portrayal of Beau. Brummel have a desire to read the life and witty sayings of the Prince of Bohemians. They can best be satisfied in a book published back in the lifters that I think is still in print. It is "The Last of the Pandies," by Captain Gronow, who was a member of the Prince of Wales set before he became "Gentleman George." The lascons and adventures of Brummel and his scapegrace conferrees is told in a delightfully chatty and spley manner by the gouty old soldier, who was once the leader of the stately minuet when they danced it at Almack's in the profligate days of the Hanoverian regime.

W. H. Baum—One of the greatest needs of South Washington is electric lights from Pennsylvania svenue to the wharf. It is not only a need for our section of the city, but for the entire city. The travel over the Seventh-street cable line is very heavy now and this coming summer it will be increased to thousands of people every day and night. Sometimes when excursion steamers are delayed people have to walk home and the lights are a necessity.

every day and night. Sometimes when excursion steamers are delayed people have to walk home and the lights are a necessity.

Miss L. A. Reveridge—Did you ever hear the indians sing? It's the most outlandish drome that you could possibly hear, with scarcely any harmony. Great numbers of people come in here and wish the Indians to sing. I always tell them that it is uscless unless they brought some sort of present, recommending a bag of apples. This is a great persuader with the Indians and they do not fail to accede to the requests of visitors when the apples appear. Some people display a great amount of thoughtlessness in visiting these Indians. The other day a young swell, whom you all know, I think, came in here with an exquisite bunch of flowers and a large basket of froit. He showed them to the Indians and naturally they got the idea that the fruit and flowers were for them. They were much onraged, however, when he turned to go. I asked him whether the basket was not for them. "Why, no." he replied, "I only wanted to show them my present to my sweetheart."

The Indians have picked up a little money by selling meccasins and other articles. Several of them have taken their moccasins off their feet in order to sell them to visitors.

Albert Sillers—I received a little note the other day which I have filled away as a memento. It was written with a lead pencil and was a brief memorandum, but it was very valuable to me and I shall keep it to recall a rather queer experience. A business firm which I represent here has had some trouble with one of its patrons. A law suit was threatened by the fellow and I have been corresponding for some time with him and also with his attorneys in an attempt to settle the malter amicably. In the course of our correspondence it became necessary to send cach other the letters exchanged between the parties. A few days ago I received a package of letters which I had forwarded to the opposition for examination. In looking these letters over I found among them a memorandum made by the p

MARRIED NINETEEN TIMES.

Fruitful Scheme of a Haltimore Couple to Obtain Money from the Charitable.

From the Chicago, Herald.

Some time ago a number of ladies interested in charity had their attention called to the destitution of a family in southwest Baltimore. The mother said the father drank and neglected his five children. Some of the ladies induced the man to reform. He went to a well-known minister and made all sorts of promises, declaring that he was tired of the life he had led and saying that he wanted to turn over a new leaf. He told the minister that he was not married to the woman led and saying that he wanted to turn over a new leaf. He told the minister that he was not married to the woman who bore his children and asked for advice. His children were growing up and, he said, had never been christened. He thought his reform would be complete if he could have them baptized.

All the ladies were very much gratified and made arrangements to have the parents married and the children christened. They bought and made the little ones ciothing, gave them money and rigged out the parents in new clothes. After the wedking was celebrated and the children christened something about the man's actions induced the minister to look up his record. The livestigation disclosed the fact that the man and woman had been matried nineteen times and the children had been christened twenty-nine times. They would live'in one section of the city long enough to get a good start in the world by getting married and having the children christened. Then they would move to another locality and go through the same performance. They were always married under different names.

New York Navy-Yard Ball.

From the New York Tribune, 9th.

The ball to be given by the officers of the Navy at the Navy-Yard to-night, the subscribers do not wish to be considered a repetition of the reception given to the Grand Duke Alexis or the other fine one given in 1885, but it is to be more of a social than of an official character. The real object is to make return for some of the courtesies extended to the officers on duty at this station by the Old Guard and other military organizations. Besides Secretary Tracy, probably Rear Admiral D. L. Braine, Generals Sherman and O. O. Howard, there will be present many officers on duty at this station, and it will be as sociable as it is possible to make it.

The ball will take place in Building No. 7, back of the Equipment Building, which stands in Main street. The guests will enter on the west end of the building, and, ascending a short flight of winding stairs, will pass under a canopy of American flags into a hall 200 feet long, on either side of which are the offices for the several departments. The main ball-room is ninety feet long and twenty-five feet wide. A frieze of bunting a foot and a half wide is run around the top of the wall, making a band of rich color. On the wall along the hall is a large American shield, over which is a festoon of American ensigns. The ceiling is pleasantly reheved with long rest, white and blue permants. Each window will hang a large ship's lantern. The lighting, however, will be principally by electricity.

AN ENGLISH ACTRESS.

Miss Nellson, at Present the Favorite of Lendon Theatre-Goers. The theatrical sensation of this season in London is furnished by Miss Julia Neil-The theatrical sensation of this season in London is furnished by Miss Julia Nellson in "The Dancing Girl," at the Haymarket Theatre. The dresses worn by Miss Nellson and the other lady players are, according to a London journal, remarkable for their elegant simplicity and suitability to the different situations in which they are worn. In the first act the danseuse, who has furnished the favorite entertainment of the London drawing-room, figures in her quiet Quaker home as the demure Drusilla Ives, wearing a simple dress of gray, apron, kerchief and little Quaker cap. A contrast to this is the exquisitely fitting dress of bright geranium color worn in the second act, which takes place at the villa at Richmond. The dress, unrelieved by either color or trimming, is made with a polonaise back, slight train, full high sleeves set into a tight cuff, and bodice with crossing folds.

In the third act, where the dancing girl appears in her parafessional character to dance for the Duke's guests, she wears a dress beautifully suited to the part of "the topmost prose of the tonmost branch." It is a ball gown of rose-pink satin, veiled with rose-colored tulle, and with long, loose trails of pink roses and foliage, falling m parallel lines from the waist to the hem of the skirt. The round, low bodice is girdled at the waist with a hand of silver embroidery and a single pink rose is placed carelessiy in the loose hem. A handsome mantle of lime-leaf green, with long, pointed sleeves lined with the same color, is worn in the earlier part of the act above the airy dress which shocks the Quaker father.

What "Ravid Transiti" Meantle and the same color, is worn in the earlier part of the act above the airy dress which shocks the

What "Rapid Trausit" Means.

The editor of the foremost electrical journal of this country thus summarizes the social advantages of "rapid transit." "By its agency the smallest city in the country is at once given a command it never had before over the territory around it. The smallest storekeeper or the humblest clerk can revel in the sweets of rural life, if he wish. His electric car, running at fifteen or twenty miles an hour, will give him more of home life—a few more golden minutes with the children in the morning, an earlier return to the wife at nightfall.

The whole social atmosphere of the What "Rapid Transit" Means.

"The whole social atmosphere of the place is vivified, and the social bonds are knit closer, as they always must inevitably be where the facilities of travel are increased and the opportunities of intercourse are multiplied. Nor is this all. Rapid transit of this nature opens up a number of districts that before were practically inaccessible for residential purposes. There are few of us who care to practice the ancient form of dissipation known as early rising, agreeing rather with Charles Lamb in the idea that to rise with the lark or to go to bed with the sheep is a popular fallary.

"There are still fewer of us who, for the sake of rural delights, care to isolate and immure ourselves in remote suburbs reached with difficulty. In vacation time, it is true, we often seek the lonellness of the woods or the solitude of the mountains, that we may commune with nature and hear the still small voice of our better self; but when we are doing the world's work fifty weeks in the year, we want to be handily situated for reaching our deak or bench. If a man lives in the city he pays high rent and takes Irish views of the landlord question. If he lives far out and wastes his time in travel he is in hearty sympathy with the eighthour movement.

"I look upon electric roads, therefore, as the

he is in hearty sympathy with the eighthour movement.

"I look upon electric roads, therefore, as likely to prove a beneficial agency in the more equal distribution of a happier population around any centre, thus increasing the return on outlying property, while by the encouragement of retail trads enhancing the profit of the area lying within the region thereafter more legitimately restricted to business occupancy. I have watched with much interest the manner in which electric roads have already thus developed suburiban areas. Booms are not particularly healthful features of progress, but they may be, and not infrequently are genuine and real; and I know nothing more likely to bring on a real estate boom of the best character with permanent results than the installation of a well-managed electric road, enabling a man to leave his work at 60 elock and be sitting down to his supper seven or ten miles out, if he wish, under his own roof-tree at 6:30."

Divorce in Italy.

We subjoin a few of the reasons given for claiming legal separation on the part of married couples in Italy: One man called his wife's sister a thief. A husband had beaten his wife's pet dog. Another constantly chewed tobacco. A third cut off his wife's curis without her consent. A fourth refused to take his better half out for a walk. A fifth compelled his wife to sit up talking with him after midnight, when she preferred going to sleep. One hady refused to sew on her husband's trousers buttoms. Another larily stayed in bed till noon every day. A third would not let her husband go near the fire on a cold winter's day. A fourth "liady" dragged her husband out of bed by his beard. A fifth went strolling around the town instead of attending to her domestic duties.
